What did we think the school year would be like? We had a new principal, who had never been a principal before, two assistant principals, who had never been assistant principals before and were also new to HHS, and an athletic director, also new to HHS, who had never been an athletic director before. Add to this two new secretaries in the hub of HHS, the student services office (formerly the attendance office), two new teachers, and a new librarian. The first word to come to mind was CHAOS.

And although things were quite chaotic at times, like when a student services secretary and a teacher resigned in the middle of the year, we struggled along, and for most of us, the year turned out to be at least business as usual to very successful.

So we dedicate this 1996 Memories yearbook to those students, faculty, staff, and administrators who survived this school year of ORGANIZED CHAOS.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office for National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; older people should be able to participate in the community; older people should be able to access the services they need; and older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

Joe,
We said a prayer for you today
And know God must have heard
We felt the answer in our hearts
Although he spoke no word
We didn't ask for wealth or fame
We knew you wouldn't mind
We asked him to send treasure of a far more lasting kind

We asked that he'd be near you
At the start of each day new
To grant you health and blessings
And friends to share your way
We asked for happiness for you
On all things great and small
But it was for him to keep you in His Loving care, we prayed for most of all.

Dad, Mom, Ben, Tricia & Aimee

Final Words

It has finally come to a close. I want to thank my entire yearbook staff. Even though, most of you kept us worrying about finishing your sections to meet deadlines, eventually everyone completed their jobs. Whether it be staying after school, coming in on Saturday mornings or coming in after graduation, at the very last minute every one of us, including myself, met our deadlines.

I had fun with all of you and I'm very proud of the hard work you did for me. Many people mistake yearbook class as just an hour of fun and an hour to take care of personal business. Well, we did do our share of gossiping and there were occasions when we didn't have much to do, but when it did come to working and meeting deadlines we got things finished. Thanks to all of you.

Finally, Mrs. Lambeth, I want to say thanks for all your help and long hours of hard work. Also, thank you for giving me a chance.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently in their own homes for as long as possible.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need to live independently.
- Older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives for the future of older people's services. These include:

- To ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need to live independently.
- To ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- To ensure that older people live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key actions for the future of older people's services. These include:

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999). The prevalence of mental health problems in the UK is estimated to be 10% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for mental health care, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The strategy aims to ensure that people with mental health problems have access to the services they need, and that they are treated with respect and dignity.

One of the key challenges in mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are able to access the services they need. This is particularly true for people who are homeless, as they often face significant barriers to accessing mental health services. The Department of Health (1999) has identified homelessness as one of the key areas where mental health care services need to be improved.

One of the ways in which mental health care services can be improved is by ensuring that people with mental health problems are able to access the services they need. This can be done by providing a range of services, including housing, mental health care, and social support.
